True freedom is extremely illusive. I would argue there have been very few times in human history, where humans have been free from tyrannical rule. Maybe when people were truly free, anarchy prevailed, but anarchy is certainly not freedom. Freedom is living within appropriately designed, agreed-to laws which align with our God-given rights. For example, a speed limit has the spirit of love behind it. It seeks to preserve life. Freedom allows each community to choose what that limit might be. If the community choose no speed limit, that is freedom. They may review that law, if too many people die as a result.

1776 was a pivotal year for the United States, but also for the entire world. Freedom was being declared and appropriate laws were being drafted. One could be forgiven for thinking that the Declaration of Independence and the US Constitution are only relevant to the US people. I would agree with this comment IF that tyrannical government was contained within the US. But what if a tyrannical government had entrenched itself in the US first, and expanded its reach throughout the globe? If this were true, then the US Constitution may be good news for the entire world.

The uniqueness of the US Constitution is that the ultimate power to govern rests with the people; and those people also have guns. Accordingly, the US Constitution provides a legal right for the people to seize authority back from any government that has become tyrannical.

So, if a tyrannical regime established a system of international government in order to gain world-wide control, any international Constitution offering people freedom would not exist. The head of the snake would likely live in the most powerful country on earth; a country that is home to the world's banking system; a country whose military has been used as the global-military, oppressing any nation who don't play by the rules. The Constitution of that nation would potentially be critical for humanity; not just for itself.

I suspect that this is exactly where the world finds itself. People in every nation on earth are now sensing the presence of this evil snake, and we can see the resistance to tyranny growing. There is one Constitution on earth that this invisible enemy is very upset about. The article will demonstrate that this invisible enemy appears to have been upset about the US Constitution, and the freedom it secures, since day one.

The invisible hand of tyranny has been waging war on humanity since time began. The #PrussiaGate papers are revealing the patterns and the playbook of this illusive beast. It has been demonstrated how this Prussian army slowly transformed into a corporate version of itself during the 1871-1917 window, as it seized control of all nations on earth, initially via a centralized banking system and then via international treaties emerging during the two world wars. The once formidable fighting army was morphing into a world-wide ideology, essentially weaponizing philosophy. Make no mistake though; they still believed they ruled over their citizenry; they were still extremely nasty; and they still used weapons. They would now commence weaponizing the collective-mind of humanity.

Let's explore the exact nature of this battle; when it really started; and who is running the show today. To do this properly, we need to be reminded of a few key events in history.

By the late 1700's, most of Europe had been brought to submission by this tyrannical rule, and these nations were now busy "building back better" thanks to the new debt-based banking system established in 1694 with the creation of the Bank of England (BoE). Detail is relevant here; as the creation of the London Corporation and BoE was done under the rule of William of Orange, alongside his wife and cousin, Queen Mary II. (Marrying the cousins was quite common among this invisible monarchy, and we still see that in modern times where Queen Elizabeth II married her cousin, Prince Phillip).

Having brought Europe to heel, the invisible enemy was now watching the US very carefully. The preparation of the Stamp Act and Townshend Act would lead to 1770 Boston massacre and much civil unrest. History shows that this unrest would ultimately usher in the American Revolutionary War in 1775. Understanding the key dates is critical to this story, noting that the Prussians usually made significant legal and structural changes during the fog of war.

Phi Beta Kappa:

As you could imagine, this was a frenetic time for both the US and the UK, as the powers of control would be shifting. Because Prussia was an army without a nation, it was always infiltrating the leadership of other nations. While hidden from view, the Prussian ideology was always planning its next regime of control. To do this, it controlled monarchy and used secret societies.

This means the formation of the oldest secret society in the US, is worth looking at.

Phi Beta Kappa was founded on December 5, 1776. This was all within six months of the Declaration of Independence! It goes without saying that the Prussian monarchy knew all about the petitions to King George III and the exact nature of the patriot uprising in the US. Is this just a coincidence?

This invisible enemy had just commenced the infiltration of the US. Cleverly it would remain hidden behind a veil of philosophy and truth, as Phi Beta Kappa was a harmless "academic honor society". In time, all truth would be undeniable, because they would define it.

Questioning truth would die a quiet death, because those who ever questioned the truth of this regime, also died a quiet death.

While humanity was searching for peace, this self-appointed, evil monarchy was making its own rules. Perhaps seeking to dodge universal spiritual laws and possible karmic blow-back, the invisible enemy created a convoluted system of Admiralty Law that declared humanity "lost at sea, or elsewhere in the realm", ensuring it only ever engaged with dead humans.

For those interested, the set-up for our current system of civil laws and debt-based banking all took place during the 1666 – 1702 window, under the reign of William of Orange. This is detailed in the #PrussiaGate 1666 article.

The emergence of Phi Beta Kappa suggests that a new ideological weapon was covertly being established within the US from 1776 onwards. It was a kingdom of the mind, parading around as absolute truth. “Trust the science”, it would say. This invisible enemy were creating a realm of philosophy. Without realizing it, humanity was being placed into a mind-control program. Eventually, it would be a crime to question anything, let alone suggest there is an invisible enemy, or a Deep State!

- Desiring education and truth could never be evil?
- Surely science can be trusted?
- Men of God would never lead us astray?
- Intelligence Agencies would never betray their people, would they?

The name may have come from the Greek motto ‘philosophia biou kybernētēs’ – “philosophy – the guide of life”. This confirms the direction that this society would head. Here they are today:

Unfortunately, there is an emerging reality on earth that is very different to what we all thought. The vast influence of this invisible enemy is being slowly revealed. This is a journey we will all take together.

Knowing that this invisible enemy uses symbols, coded-language and public clues to communicate their actions, let’s explore the founding of Phi Beta Kappa?

William III (William Henry; Dutch: Willem Hendrik; 4 November 1650 – 8 March 1702),^[b] also widely known as William of Orange was the sovereign Prince of Orange from birth, Stadtholder of Holland, Zeeland, Utrecht, Guelders, and Overijssel in the Dutch Republic from the 1670s, and King of England, Ireland, and Scotland from 1689 until his death in 1702. As King of Scotland, he is known as William II.^[1] He is sometimes informally known as "King Billy" in Ireland and Scotland.^[2] His victory at the Battle of the Boyne in 1690 is commemorated by Unionists, who display orange colours in his honour. He ruled Britain alongside his wife and cousin Queen Mary II, and popular histories usually refer to their reign as that of "William and Mary".

William was the only child of William II, Prince of Orange, and Mary, Princess Royal and Princess of Orange, the daughter of Charles I of England, Scotland, and Ireland. His father died a week before his birth, making William III the Prince of Orange from birth. In 1677, he married Mary, the eldest daughter of his maternal uncle James, Duke of York, the younger brother of Charles II of England, Scotland, and Ireland. The Protestant William participated in several wars against the powerful Catholic French ruler Louis XIV in coalition with both Protestant and Catholic powers in Europe. Many Protestants heralded William as a champion of their faith. In 1685, his Catholic uncle and father-in-law, James, became king of England, Scotland, and Ireland. James's reign was unpopular with the Protestant majority in Britain, who feared a revival of Catholicism. Supported by a group of influential British political and religious leaders, William invaded England in what became known as the Glorious Revolution. In 1688, he landed at the south-western English port of Brixham. Shortly afterwards, James was deposed.

Understanding the history of Prussia will inevitably lead you to the House of Orange, which was also the House of Hohenzollern. This is all detailed in the #PrussiaGate papers.

The origins of tyranny, far too consistently come back to the Oranges. This leads to an awkward question. Rather than being a dope, and unfit to be President; was this what President Trump meant when three times he “accidentally” said we need to get to the “oranges” of the investigation?

Trump can't pronounce the word origins - says "oran...

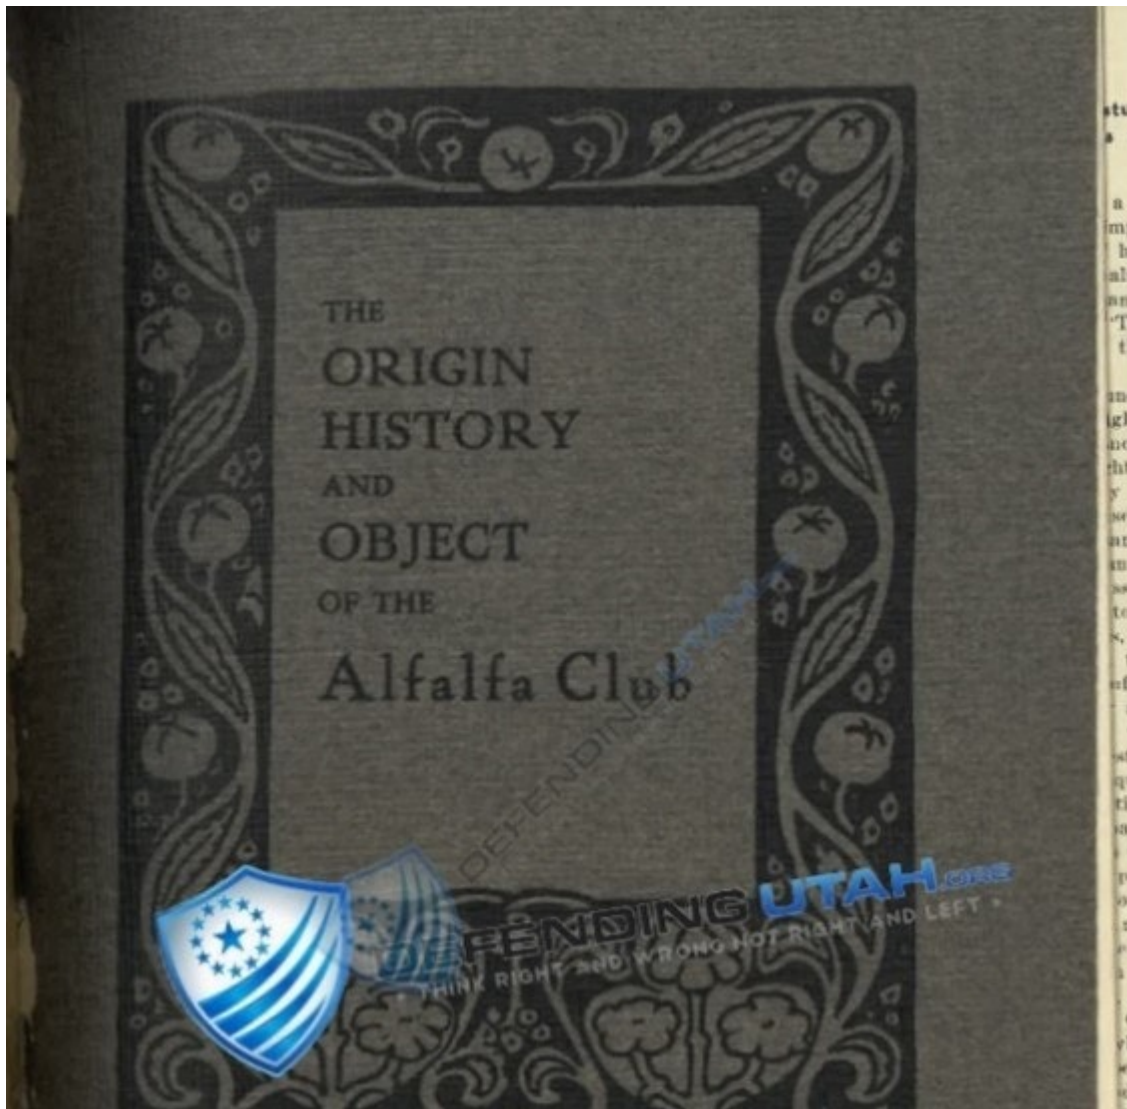

Don't think for one minute that the British didn't know the power of secret societies! Obviously, Freemasonry is a famous one, but several were around during the 1700's. For the deep diggers, here is a comprehensive article looking at the European monarchy and their marriages. It shows a devotion to preserving the royal lineage descended from Rosicrucian "Alchemical Wedding" of Frederick V of the Palatinate and Elizabeth Stuart. This was no hobby, this was a vast, planned network of rulership.

Alfalfa Club:

Prussia was an invisible army that remained continually mobile. The #PrussiaGate papers have shown the significance of the 1666 – 1702 and the 1871 – 1917 windows, where Prussia infiltrated, oppressed and then activated their corporate/ banking strategy. This playbook was applied first around Europe (1666 – 1702) and then around the entire earth (1871 – 1917).

The creation of the Alfalfa Club in 1913 just before WW1 in 1914 was significant, particularly given its notable membership (listed later). Here is a 1917 publication outlining the origin history of the Club:

https://liberty.blob.core.windows.net/public/Continuing%20Education/books/Alfalfa_club_history_With_watermark.pdf

The fascinating story of Alfalfa's history records that these great royal secrets had been discovered at some unknown location in a secret chamber that was discovered behind a loose stone. In recent times, this was confirmed by documents found in Germany.

the hearth. He did not attend to his duty very well, according to history with which we are all familiar, because he let the cakes burn, for which he was very severely criticised by the housewife upon her return. This, of course, he had to take with good grace, because he was supposedly a traveller. The truth of it is that when she left the room, he discovered, because of a loose stone, a large secret chamber in which were hidden these valuable records which he had been devouring with great interest during the lady's absence. This is the only instance which is any particular interest until I found the documents in Germany several years ago.

This comprises all of this particular manuscript, but there was to follow in a few days one containing the great secrets.

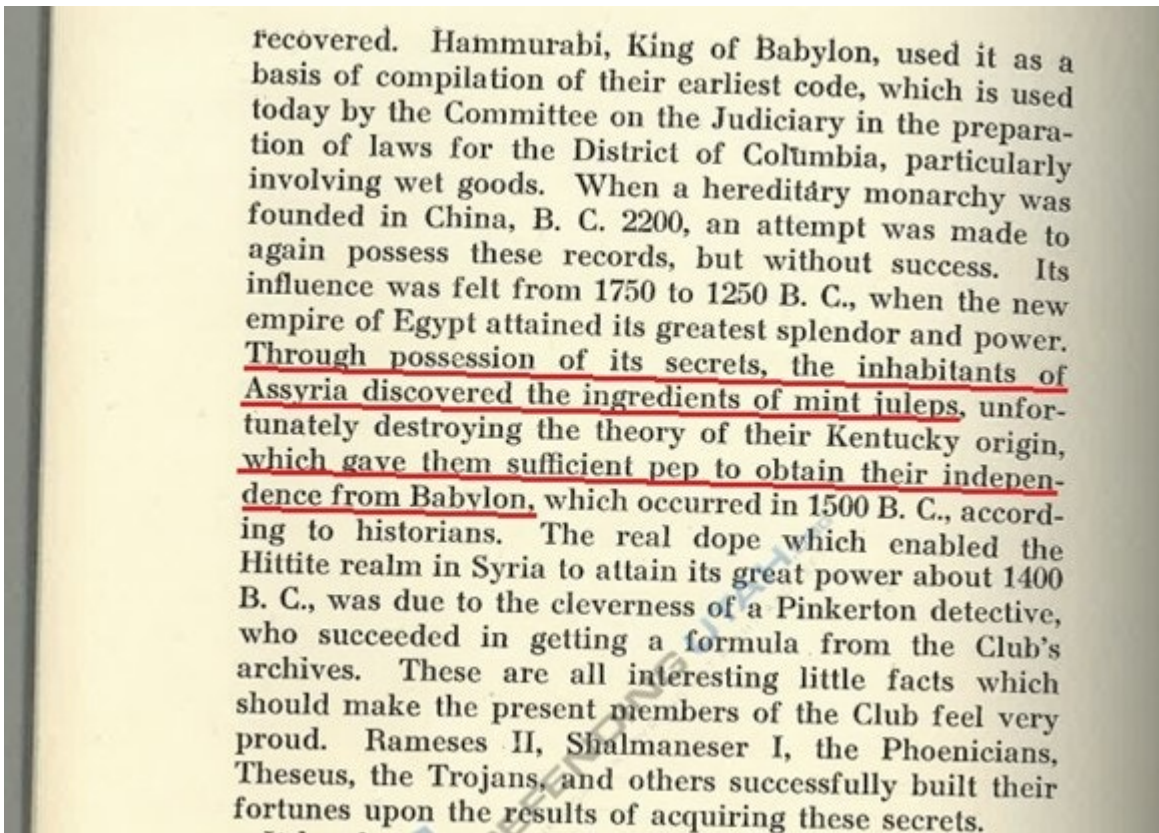

The gentleman who called was so reluctant about his address that I did not insist upon his giving it to me. It seemed perfectly reasonable to suppose that there would not be any question about his calling with the remaining data, because he had seemed so anxious to get this to me. He seemed to be one who must be treated with the utmost consideration, because naturally having made such a wonderful discovery, he would be careful in the extreme. Several weeks passed. This seemed very strange, because he had given his assurance that in a few days he would call again. However, a very short time ago, an explanatory letter was received, which read as follows:

"Somewhere, 1917.

The story goes on to note that Alfalfa Club name was given by King Menes, of ancient times. The Alfalfa Club was entrusted to protect the "great royal secrets." It seems that these great secrets had moved around various monarchies for centuries. The secrets were said to be "the power behind the throne through generations of dynasties."

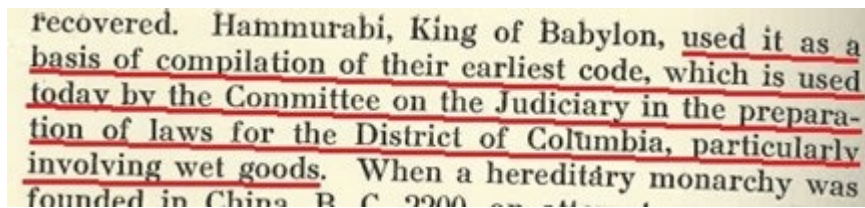

When the first known king of the human race, Menes, united the two kingdoms of Egypt under one crown, which epoch is placed by various historians from 2717 B. C. to 5867 B. C., he found it necessary to gather about him a number of real good friends, who would not mix up with the barbarians to his detriment. To this association was intrusted the great roval secrets. It was called by the king, himself, "The Alfalfa Club," which name has remained to the present day. Permit me to suggest here that it was possibly because they were so well fed by royalty that the weed we know as "alfalfa," meaning, in Arabic, "the best fodder," received its name centuries ago, rather than that the Club was named subsequently, as previously supposed. Upon the founding of the City of Memphis, and the building of the great temple of Pta, the royal archives were deposited with this organization. Mesilim, King of Kish, E-Anna-Tum, Queen Nictocrosis, Asshurbanipal, King of Ninevah, Cyrus, King of Elam, and their successors, turned to this Club for pleasure, assistance and protection. It was guardian of the roval archives. Although little known in history, it was the power behind the throne through the generations of dynasties. It was the Colonel E. M. House of the olden days. When Babylon was invaded by the Semites, which is placed as far back as 5000 B. C., it was really for the purpose of acquiring the archives of the Alfalfa Club, which they knew contained such secrets as would give them the power they desired. Mesilim, King of Kish, acquired them through the subjugation of Shirpurla, Mesopotamia, and later E-Anna-Tum, upon throwing off the Kish yoke, came into possession of these much-desired secrets. When the Chinese Empire was founded in 2800 B. C., a Western Union messenger boy escaped with the secrets, which he hid in what is now Manchuria. Later, with the assistance of Asshurbanipal, they were again

The book goes on to say the secrets included knowledge about ancient herbs that seemed to provide the "pep", essential to surviving war and oppression.

The above screen also makes a very unusual reference to the District of Columbia. If accurate, this further confirms our previous assertions that the Prussian infiltration into global corporations took place during the 1871 - 1917 window.

Recall, that the Prince of Prussia was made Emperor of Germany in January 1871 and Washington DC was made a Corporate in February 1871. Whatever this ancient code or knowledge that the Alfalfa Club had, they were now using it to craft new laws for the District of Columbia.

What on earth could these new laws for DC be about?

What we do know is that the Alfalfa Club was founded in 1913; in the same year as the Federal Reserve Act. I do not consider this to be a coincidence.

I believe that the Alfalfa Club was established as a think tank of carefully-selected political and business leaders, assigned with crafting laws and language applicable to corporations (corpses) and banking. One example of such language is the term ‘mortgage’, which literally means “death pledge”. The reference to DC laws involving “wet goods” is a reference to commerce, and relates to products containing liquids. The sale of animals is an example.

History records show that the late 1600s and early 1700s were characterized by the massive African slave trade into America, coordinated and funded out of the UK by royals, politicians and merchants, via the Royal African Company. This trade accelerated under the reign of William of Orange in 1689. The House of Orange/ Prussian regime now controlling the UK Crown, likely developed and refined the techniques and laws that allowed the legal trade of human cargo (being “wet goods”).

By 1917, the central reserve banking system had been established and it was planned to place all citizens into an elaborate system of commerce. This captivity would eventually be seen as debt slavery, but in the early days, it was cleverly framed as opportunity and prosperity. New language and new laws were being introduced to the US people. The Alfalfa Club appears to be the vehicle empowered to do this.

Language is essential to casting the spell over humanity. When people adopt the invisible narrator’s language and global story-line, we come into agreement with their creation. We are not creating; we are responding. Our agreement confirms we are in an active contract and we are now joined together in civil law. A mandate is just an offer of a contract. If it is not agreed to, there is no law. Tacit agreement by compliance, is what creates the law. It matters not that it violates our freedoms, because we agreed to a contract. This is a modern expression of ancient Roman Trust law, where the Trustee in Roman times could legally steal and deceive in perpetuity, provided the beneficiary didn’t object.

This Alfalfa document goes on to reveal that these ‘secrets’ were essential to winning wars, and that the Kaiser (Prince of Prussia) depended on these for his successes in battle. This is an incredible connection, linking Prussian ideology to current international government. Furthermore, don’t forget that at this time, the Prince of Prussia was the German Emperor, who was also the Arbiter of the Treaty of Washington (1871) between the US and the UK, created in May 1871.

Dear Mr. Burton:

You are undoubtedly wondering what has become of me. You have a right to do so, because of my promises. Undoubtedly, however, when you understand my reason, you will quite agree with me that it has been the course of wisdom. One hardly knows what to do in such strange times, particularly about so important a question. You undoubtedly were impressed with the fact that the manuscript left with you stated that the documents in question were found in Germany several years ago. This is the true situation. It was with the utmost difficulty that they were brought out of that country. The truth of it is that the Kaiser depended upon these for the success of the present war to such an extent that if for one moment he had thought they were gone, he would have waited until they were found again. When it was discovered that they were not any longer in their place, the most trained members of his secret service were set upon the trail. It would be worth my life to have one of them locate me now, for which reason I have not dared to give you an address by which you could communicate with me. It must remain so until there is a termination of the present conditions. It is my belief that Germany is now continuing the war with the hope that these great secrets may be located in time to give her supremacy. To be sure, however, they never will, unless it is for the benefit of this country, which, of course, would be the realization of my ambition. When I have determined upon a method which will enable me to leave my present hiding place, in order that I may present the records to the proper authorities, I shall communicate with you. When the opportunity presents you may expect to hear from me again.

Sincerely yours,
FRIEND OF ALFALFA."

While the manuscript as an entirety is not complete, I felt that it was only proper to acquaint the members of the Alfalfa Club with such information as had been presented to me up to this time.

Sincerely yours,
H. RALPH BURTON.

Union Trust Building,
Washington, D. C.

The story of Alfalfa goes on to note that things need to remain hidden “until there is a termination of the present conditions”. The statement goes on to suggest that these secrets will eventually give Germany supremacy. Supremacy over what?

Several signs point to the reality that Prussian forces were quietly seizing supremacy over the US. Infiltration commenced in 1776; the legal building process commenced in 1871; the actual operation commenced in 1917.

The connections between (1) the US entry into WW1, (2) the Alfalfa Club laws for the District of Columbia corporation, and (3) the role of the US central bankers, cannot be discarded. The Zimmerman Telegraph shows that US were essentially goaded into the war, after they were attacked by Germany.

World War One was a close affair with Germany and the Triple alliance being as likely at some stages of winning the war as the Triple Entente were, but the entry of the United States tilted the balance towards the Entente dramatically. However, this so easily could of not happen, if not because of the Zimmermann Telegraph and the paranoia of Imperial Germany's leaders against the United States, which was far from the truth with the United States trying to remain neutral.

Even though there were large loans from US financiers like J.P Morgan to the Entente that were hedging their bets on a German defeat, more importantly, the public opinion that the government needed for war was mostly of a neutral stance. But German paranoia of the United States ultimately led to the unrestricted targeting of US passengers and merchant's vessels and the Zimmermann Telegraph effectively bought about Imperial Germanys own defeat.

1917 would also see President Wilson launch 'The Inquiry'. The intricate planning around 1917 is obvious, once you know where and how to look.

The Inquiry planned the peace treaties that would follow WW1, and launched the leaders that would go on to attend the Paris Peace Conference in 1919, which then directly led to the creation of Council on Foreign Relations (CFR) in 1921.

Weaponizing Philosophy would eventually require the "scholars" to be installed into global leadership, The origins of The Inquiry and the CFR reveal exactly when and how this took place; it was in 1917 and it was overseen by philosophers.

The Inquiry

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

For other uses, see Inquiry \(disambiguation\).

The Inquiry was a study group established in September 1917 by Woodrow Wilson to prepare materials for the peace negotiations following World War I. The group, composed of around 150 academics, was directed by the presidential adviser Edward House and supervised directly by the philosopher Sidnev Mezes. The Heads of Research were Walter Lippmann and his successor Isaiah Bowman. The group first worked out of the New York Public Library but later worked from the offices of the American Geographical Society of New York once Bowman had joined the group.^[1]

Mezes's senior colleagues were the geographer Isaiah Bowman, the historian and librarian Archibald Cary Coolidge, the historian James Shotwell, and the lawyer David Hunter Miller.^[1] Progressive confidants who were consulted on staffing but did not contribute directly to the administration or reports of the group included James Truslow Adams, Louis Brandeis, Abbott Lawrence Lowell, and Walter Weyl.

Twenty-one members of The Inquiry, later integrated into the larger American Commission to Negotiate Peace, traveled to the Paris Peace Conference in January 1919^[2] and accompanied Wilson aboard USS George Washington to France.

Also included in the group were such academics as Paul Monroe, a professor of history at Columbia University and a key member of the Research Division who drew on his experience in the Philippines to assess the educational needs of developing areas such as Albania, Turkey, and Central Africa,^[3] and Frank A. Golder, a history professor from Washington State University, who specialized in the diplomatic history of Russia and wrote papers on Ukraine, Lithuania, Poland, and Russia.^[4]

Origins, 1918 to 1945 [\[edit\]](#)

Towards the end of World War I, a working fellowship of about 150 scholars called "The Inquiry" was tasked to brief President Woodrow Wilson about options for the postwar world when Germany was defeated. This academic band, including Wilson's closest adviser and long-time friend "Colonel" Edward M. House, as well as Walter Lippmann, met to assemble the strategy for the postwar world.^{[3]:13–14} The team produced more than 2,000 documents detailing and analyzing the political, economic, and social facts globally that would be helpful for Wilson in the peace talks. Their reports formed the basis for the Fourteen Points, which outlined Wilson's strategy for peace after war's end. These scholars then traveled to the Paris Peace Conference 1919 and participated in the discussions there.^{[4]:1–5}

Hon. John W. Davis, first elected CFR president.^[2]

As a result of discussions at the Peace Conference, a small group of British and American diplomats and scholars met on May 30, 1919 at the Hotel Majestic in Paris and decided to create an Anglo-American organization called "The Institute of International Affairs", which would have offices in London and New York.^{[3]:12[4]:5} Ultimately, the British and American delegates formed separate institutes, with the British developing the Royal Institute of International Affairs or Chatham House in London. Due to the isolationist views prevalent in American society at the time, the scholars had difficulty gaining traction with their plan, and turned their focus instead to a set of discreet meetings which had been taking place since June 1918 in New York City, under the name "Council on Foreign Relations". The meetings were headed by the corporate lawyer Elihu Root, who had served as Secretary of State under President Theodore Roosevelt, and attended by 108 "high-ranking officers of banking, manufacturing, trading and finance companies, together with many lawyers".

The members were proponents of Wilson's internationalism, but were particularly concerned about "the effect that the war and the treaty of peace might have on postwar business".^{[4]:6–7} The scholars from the inquiry saw an opportunity to create an organization that brought diplomats, high-level government officials, and academics together with lawyers, bankers, and industrialists to engineer government policy. On July 29, 1921, they filed a certification of incorporation, officially forming the Council on Foreign Relations.^{[4]:8–9}

Council on Foreign Relations

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Not to be confused with United States Senate Committee on Foreign Relations or European Council on Foreign Relations.

The Council on Foreign Relations (CFR), founded in 1921, is a United States nonprofit think tank specializing in U.S. foreign policy and international affairs. It is headquartered in New York City, with an additional office in Massachusetts. Its membership, which numbers 5,103, has included senior politicians, numerous secretaries of state, CIA directors, bankers, lawyers, professors, and senior media figures.

CFR meetings convene government officials, global business leaders and prominent members of the intelligence and foreign-policy community to discuss international issues. CFR has published the bi-monthly journal Foreign Affairs since 1922, and runs the David Rockefeller Studies Program, which influences foreign policy by making recommendations to the presidential administration and diplomatic community, testifying before Congress, interacting with the media, and publishing on foreign policy issues.

The CFR is a think-tank discussing international issues, running the David Rockefeller Studies Program (whose family-line was Prussian) and advising presidents, congress and interacting with media, while also being the “story-teller” to the world in respect of foreign affairs. That is some power!

Not only was the US were attacked by German missiles in 1917. We are now able to show that their academic system had been attacked, their finance system had been attacked, their secret societies had been attacked, their political system had been attacked, their scientific community had been attacked and their media had been attacked. The rise of global corporations would mean the media would be easy prey for infiltration, over time. The myriad of Treaties that would emerge during the two world wars, would ensure their intelligence agencies would also be brought under control.

This is why Trump said:

“We were attacked like never before; not since 1917”.

“1917 - the Great Pandemic, they say, which some say did not end until the end of 1945; the soldiers were too sick to fight”.

Back to the Alfalfa history. Supremacy, or control, would only be achieved if “it is for the benefits of this country, which, of course, would be the realization of my ambition.” This appears to be a direct admission of German infiltration of the US. The method behind the new DC laws would be design to make the US people think that this new banking system was for their benefit, and was in their interests. The presence of new money after a powerful performance in WW1 was the means to achieve this objective. Prussia was seizing its next host, while creating a new legal language and public narrative that would make the people buy-in to this new regime.

This Alfalfa history provides a fantastic insight into the Deep State; why they need to remain invisible and keep the people under a spell. We can now begin to see what long-term enemy-plan the 2016-2020 Trump-era leadership interrupted. Trump simply revealed that this plan wasn't "for the benefit of this country", and people slowly began to see it. In four short years he destroyed an infiltration plan that commenced in 1776, and got fully launched in 1917, during the fog of WW1.

Let's summarize some facts around 1917:

- The Kaiser (now the Emperor of Germany) was overseeing Germany's involvement in WW1;
- The Kaiser was the Arbiter of an active Treaty between the US and UK;
- Germany attacked US merchant ships, luring them into WW1;
- The Alfalfa Club was writing new laws for the District of Columbia Corporation;
- Pres. Woodrow Wilson convened "The Inquiry", that would inform the creation of the CFR;
- The US enacted the Espionage Act of 1917;
- The Bolshevik Revolution of 1917 (absolutely related, but not for this paper);
- The Balfour Declaration – a letter from the UK's Foreign Secretary Arthur Balfour to Lord Rothschild, a leader of the British Jewish community, for transmission to the 'Zionist Federation of Great Britain and Ireland' (absolutely related, but not for this paper);

Contemplate the vast authority and context that the Kaiser had at this time. Really consider it. He had active influence in all three major nations in WW1, including one that attacked the US. He appears to have been passing on secrets to the Alfalfa Club, who would become one of the most significant Clubs in the US; with Presidents, politicians and billionaires on its membership. Furthermore, all three of the nations he was overseeing were working together to establish a centralized banking system that would eventually control every nation on earth through a debt-based monetary system. The role of the Prince of Prussia on earth at this time, cannot be overstated.

The US was at war was from 1917 – 1945. The Prussian Empire was dissolved in 1947; exactly 33 years after WW1 commenced in July of 1914. Could this be a Masonic clue that the transfer of Prussian power into the global corporations and banking system had been successfully achieved?

In my view, 1917 saw the launch of the most significant mind-weapon upon humanity. Philosophy had been weaponized on a global scale. Banking was involved; education was involved; science was involved; media was involved; religion was involved. All the pieces were in place for an incredible assault on humanity.

This entire infiltration is summed up brilliantly by George Carlin in this short clip:

George Carlin - It's a big club and you ain't in it

Here is a link to many recognizable people who are members of the Club \(the Alfalfa Club\).

Here is just one example of a significant Prussian agent who is a member of the Alfalfa Club and also linked to an elite academic society.

Henry Kissinger received his AB degree summa cum laude, Phi Beta Kappa^[27] in political science from Harvard College in 1950, where he lived in Adams House and studied under William Yandell Elliott.^[28] His senior undergraduate thesis, titled The Meaning of History: Reflections on Spengler, Toynbee and Kant, was over 400 pages long, and was the origin of the current limit on length (35,000 words).^{[29][30][31]} He received his MA and PhD degrees at Harvard University in 1951 and 1954, respectively. In 1952, while still a graduate student at Harvard, he served as a consultant to the director of the Psychological Strategy Board,^[32] and founded a magazine, Confluence.^[33] At that time, he sought to work as a spy for the FBI.^{[33][34]}

Prussian ideology had weaponized philosophy, ensuring that the world would be endlessly fighting each other about correct belief and which philosophy you identify with. This war against human consciousness is ferocious. This mind virus is controlling people's belief systems, luring them into ideological arguments, all while this evil monarchy remains hidden in the shadows. Dressler's speech in The Sum of All Fears suggests that the internet and television would allow for the creation of such an airborne virus:

This is another fantastic article by Patel Patriot that connects the current devolution of the US government with the #PrussiaGate papers. It also explores some incredible connections between the Alfalfa Club and its leaders today and the other organizations they influence. It is quite brilliant. I would encourage all readers to read this article carefully, and all of Patel's articles on devolution. They encourage expansive thinking.

- Does reading detailed research papers take time and hard work? Yes
- Does the enemy rely on us being lazy? Yes
- Why do we need to know all this? Because you cannot leave a captivity that you can't see.

Patel Patriot's article provides a powerful conclusion that shows how the US government became so infiltrated, and that some form of devolution of government was the only way to defeat this invisible enemy. After all, the invisible enemy had been planning for this moment since 1776.

What are the chances that David Rubenstein is the President of the Alfalfa Club and that very club's origins are based upon supposed documents once held by the Kaiser of Germany (King of Prussia)? Whether the "secret documents" are real or not, the pamphlet itself is and so is the connection it provides.

As you read through Prussia Gate, and I once again can't stress how important it is you do so, you'll come to the same conclusion I did - the Prussia Gate story is impossible to deny. It's also undeniable that Devolution is happening as we speak. David Rubenstein and the Alfalfa club serve as the connection point between Prussia Gate and Devolution.

The Prussian model of "infiltration instead of invasion" was the only way to defeat America. They almost succeeded. The complexity of the NGOs and global corporations involved in global politics is the modern day version of the Prussian method of control that has developed over hundreds of years and it cannot be dismantled overnight. Trump and the devolution team have been facing a monumental task. Part of defeating this enemy is becoming aware of who they are and how they operate. How can you defeat an enemy that operates only in the shadows?

Devolution reveals a covert patriot operation taking place just out of public view. This is ironic, as the enemy's infiltration of government was done precisely the same way; covertly, just out of public view. While the head of this beast in the US, it now has a powerful influence world-wide. The vaccine for this mind virus, was deployed by Trump. The vaccine was total freedom. Equally, any directive by Trump about the vaccine would have been labelled tyrannical and conspiratorial, allowing him to be presented as a dictator. He simply gave people the freedom to choose and stood aside. This is the correct way to fight an ancient philosophical weapon. You cannot just take the counter-view, as this perpetuates the philosophical war. You must always promote freedom of choice. In this war of tyranny versus freedom, the vaccine was Trump's greatest achievement.

My sense is that we will need to revert back to the constitutional freedom established in 1776 and get about winning the real battle that commenced during the fog of World War 1, which I am suggesting actually commenced in 1917, exactly as Trump told us.

There is much work to be done to win this war and create transparency in government. Essentially, we must remove the Prussian ruling monarchy for their authority seats, along with all its ideology. This requires us all to recognize what weaponized philosophy actually looks and feels like. The media gaslighting, critical race theory and identity-accusations are a good place to start learning.

This tyrannical desire to rule others must also be removed from within ourselves. Tyranny has been at play on the earth for a long time. We have all been oppressed by it, in some way and we have all oppressed others, in some way. In a way, humanity could be considered as an abuse victim. Self-examination brings the permission to begin healing.

Good luck.

An invisible hand sits behind humanity, exerting control over the human will. This hidden virus scours the earth, looking for hosts who will adopt its ideology, and wage war against dissenters. You cannot leave a captivity that you cannot see.

Anyone notice that President Donald John Trump is not listed as a member of the Alfalfa Club, as a Billionaire Businessman or as Head of State?

I have studied Donald J. Trump for most of my life; he has never been in the Club and he has ALWAYS been underestimated. (I am not much younger than he.)

This Club is very afraid of Donald J. Trump the man and more importantly, Donald J. Trump, Head of State. He now has more power than all in the Club, they may not realize it yet but I do believe they will before God is finished using him to take back this country from the evil driven tyrannical Club intent.

We need to keep moving forward daily, do not comply, and by all means, live our best lives now.

This is both terrifying and fascinating. This explains the seemingly twilight zone experience I wake up to every morning that I tend to suppress just to get through the day to be able to function productively and with purpose. It connected the dots I've been chasing. I've read all of the PP devolution series as of current and understanding what is at stake and the sheer magnitude of the task at hand, gives me more patience in a world cloaked in instant gratification. Knowing the origins of how and why we are in the situation we find ourselves in now is frightening and enlightening all at once. It's like being ill and taking a pill to fix something that you don't know the origins of in the first place and expecting results. Once you know the origins of your illness, only then can you remedy it effectively so it is completely gone, never to return, if you stay vigilant. Thank you for the awakening/enlightenment.
