This series has revealed the incredible power that large corporations had over government policy; many of which openly embraced a fascist ideology. We looked specifically at Legion, who was founded to prepare the United States people for war, and serve the interests of the monopolists who founded it. We learned that the National Association of Manufacturers (NAM) was happy to use tax payer dollars to fund the KKK and other fascist organizations. This article will close-out this series.

Mitre:

When you scour declassified government files, you sometimes find random things. On this occasion we found that large corporations weren't just influencing government decisions, they were being afforded significant levels of security access:

MEMORANDUM FOR DIRECTOR, DEFENSE INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

SUBJECT: MITRE Access

Request that you grant authorization to the C3I Division, MITRE Corporation, to have the same access to intelligence information as a government agency. The C3I Division, MITRE Corporation, is a Federal Contract Research Center and, as such, should be accorded access to information as outlined in DIA memorandum, 28 May 1982, Ref U-6222/OS-3B. They should be able to receive caveated intelligence marked "NOT RELEASABLE TO CONTRACTORS/CONSULTANTS" (NOCONTRACT).

This request repeats that of my earlier memorandum (23 Dec 82) and includes descriptive material on the MITRE Corporation as requested in your 12 Jan 1983 memorandum (ref U-7506/OS-3B).

An internal CIA file-note reveals that Mitre Corporation appeared to be coaching the US intelligence agencies:

5. SAFE

On 3 November, representatives from the user, support, and training organizations from both the CIA and the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) will be briefed by the Mitre Corporation on how the SAFE Training Plan will be developed. Mitre is the contractor responsible for this task.

²

Now, to be fair, the eighties were a while ago; we should check if the Mitre Corporation even still exists.

Not only are they still around; business appears to be booming! They even look like they are running a modern version of Operation SAFE?

A search of the company's website reveals they are a massive player in space technology, Artificial Intelligence, and cyber-security. We were particularly intrigued by a page on their website which lists "Government Innovation" as one of their nominated Focus Areas:

Helping government improve mission execution and outcomes

Government agencies interact with us every day in countless ways. From taxpayers and small businesses to veterans and election officials—MITRE helps the government work better for the public.

How? By helping transform government processes and systems to improve mission execution and outcomes, such as:

- Preventing tax fraud and improper payments
- Identifying supply chain vulnerabilities
- Increasing veterans' access to healthcare
- Informing the development of equitable and effective policy
- Ensuring our nation's resources are protected and used efficiently
- Facing the challenges of the Great Power Competition, from critical infrastructure and healthcare to economic stability and telecommunications

4

Are these guys contracting to government, or are they running it?

A couple of questions arise here: Do we really want our governments innovating for us? Wouldn't a true free-market economy allow the people to innovate, while the government takes more of a back seat?

Whatever the case, the above screen shot from Mitre Corporation's website reveals the extent of their influence in every facet of modern society.

Also, what on earth is "mission execution"? When you have a government that needs to improve "mission execution", it is an indicator that they are running some kind of operation. The only question is what kind of mission are they involved in. What are they trying to achieve? Are they conducting an operation against some type of unknown threat?

We certainly don't know much, but what we do know is that the CIA asked for the Mitre Corporation to be cleared as a pseudo-agency in 1983, and they still appear to be pretty cozy:

Austin Y. Wang is vice president, intelligence at MITRE. In this role, he leads MITRE's efforts to drive whole-of-nation, joint, and multi-agency solutions through integration across the intelligence community and our larger national security enterprise, while shaping MITRE's and our nation's response to national security challenges. A senior intelligence community executive with nearly 30 years in leadership roles, Wang joined MITRE after 21 years with the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), most recently as a senior executive and clandestine technical operations lead.

During his CIA tenure, he directed the HUMINT [human intelligence] Technology Office for the Directorate of Science and Technology (DS&T). Wang also directed a joint intelligence community global organization, managing end-to-end activities related to unique intelligence, from collection and processing, through analysis and dissemination.

Earlier in this series, we showed that IG Farben's "council of the gods" was operating inside the US, as the National Association of Manufacturers \(NAM\). We have shown that this self-appointed group of leaders, were also the heads of huge corporations and banking houses. These fascists were exerting considerable influence upon the US way of life. What might a society look like today if control of that nation has been handed over to globalist corporations?

While they received security access in 1983, Mitre have been working with the government for quite a while:

MITRE began in 1958, sponsored by the U.S. Air Force to bridge across the academic research community and industry to architect the Semi-Automatic Ground Environment, or SAGE, a key component of Cold War-era air defense. We were founded as a not-for-profit company to serve as objective advisers in systems engineering to government agencies, both military and civilian.

We are innovators—from advances in radar technology, cyber, GPS, cancer research, and aviation collision-avoidance systems to breakthroughs in evolving disciplines such as vehicle autonomy, artificial intelligence, and synthetic biology.

Moreover, as a company that doesn't compete with industry, we're uniquely positioned to convene government, industry, and academia to collaborate on big societal challenges, from pandemic response to highway safety to social justice.

At its core, MITRE's story is about our people. We're proud that more than 9,000 multi-talented and creative individuals choose to stand with us every day, dedicating themselves to our mission of solving problems for a safer world.

The founding of Mitre provides us with a very interesting data point. It was a brand-new not-for-profit organization that managed to jag US Army sponsorship, prior to being operational. Was this an organic start-up, or was it an installation? Was Mitre Corp. a creation of embedded fascists operating within the US at this time?

We detailed the vast coordination taking place in global intelligence, during 1945 to 1956. While we may never be able to definitively answer these questions about Mitre, it is worth summarizing some of the details that we've learned throughout this series:

- 1945 saw Nazi spy chief, Reinhard Gehlen, “captured”, arriving in the US, commencing his connection with the central intelligence (then known as Office of Strategic Services).
- 1946 saw Gehlen released to establish the secret intelligence agency inside occupied Germany. A Signals Intelligence agreement was made between Britain and the US, which would later become known as Five Eyes 7.
- 1947 saw the creation of the National Security Act of 1947 in the US, allowing for the creation of an intelligence network of agencies.
- 1948 saw Canada join the British – US Signals Intelligence agreement.
- NATO was formed in July 1949. 8
- 1949 was the year the US finalized the Nuremberg trials, in preparation for Operation Paperclip. Reinhard Gehlen was now running the Gehlen Organization (the Secret Intelligence Agency) of the Federal Republic of Germany, and advising the CIA.
- By 1951-52, the CIA’s Security Office was working with Camp Dietrick’s Special Operations Division (SOD), partnering with a select group of scientists, conducting a series of ultra-secret experiments with LSD, and numerous other enhancers 9.
- In 1953, the Gehlen spy network, was uncovered in Germany. Some of his own agents revealed there were some 4000 political and military experts, and thousands of agents operating throughout many countries.
- In 1956 the German Secret Intelligence Agency (BND) was formerly recognized and Gehlen was made its first President 10.
- 1956 was also when Australia and New Zealand joined the Allied Nation’s Signal Intelligence agreement, thereby establishing ‘Five Eyes’. 11

Just two years after the establishment of Five Eyes, the Mitre Corporation was founded in 1958. Despite having no obvious track record, Mitre secured significant military sponsorship from the US Air Force – for research. Their stated mandate was to bridge the gap between academic research and industry. Was anything taking place at this point in history organic, or was it all being carefully orchestrated?

We showed in Part 5 that Gehlen was involved in establishing NATO in 1949, and he was also ensuring that Nazi “specialists” were being installed into the intelligence agencies of numerous nations. The CIA also noted that he was doing all this while maintaining “close contact with the United States Intelligence”. 12

We highlight this detail because there was another critical detail that Gehlen was hoping to achieve during his 1949:

Accompanied by Col. William R. Philp, the US Army officer responsible for the Gehlen Organization, Gehlen met with the American military attaches in Rome, Madrid, and Paris. The meetings in Rome were particularly important because Gehlen wanted to renew his wartime ties with the Vatican.⁵⁷ (S)

13

This Nazi-Vatican connection is significant because of Pope Pius XII’s failure to condemn the mass murder of Jews during the Second World War. His papacy stretched from 1939 to 1958. 14

Was it Gehlen’s Vatican connection that led to some highly-unusual assets within the CIA?

Since World War II, the CIA has:

- subsidized a Catholic lay organization that served as the political slugging arm of the pope and the Vatican throughout the Cold War;
- penetrated the American section of one of the wealthiest and most powerful Vatican orders;
- passed money to a large number of priests and bishops — some of whom became witting agents in CIA covert operations;
- employed undercover operatives to lobby members of the Curia (the Vatican government) and spy on liberal churchmen on the pope's staff who challenged the political assumptions of the United States;
- prepared intelligence briefings that accurately predicted the rise of liberation theology; and
- collaborated with right-wing Catholic groups to counter the actions of progressive clerics in Latin America.

One is forced to consider that what we assumed were separate, disparate organizations, operating in the interests of humanity, may just be 'shop-fronts' to hide the invisible enemy. Were these organizations noble, authoritative entities, or part of an elaborate deception?

While we digest the fact that the Vatican was also a part of the global spy network, let's briefly touch on the Knights of Malta; a legendary Vatican order dating back to the Crusades, where "warrior monks" served as the military arm of the Catholic church. Today, these 'warrior monks' are known as the Sovereign Military Order of Malta 16 (SMOM).

Although the SMOM has no land mass other than a small headquarters in Rome, this unique papal entity holds the status of a nation-state. It mints coins, prints stamps, has its own constitution, issues license plates, and issues passports to an accredited diplomatic corps. The grand master of the Order holds a rank in the church equal to a Cardinal, and is recognized as a Sovereign Chief of State 17 by 41 nations, with which the SMOM even exchanges ambassadors.

The SMOM continues its tradition of the original knights by supporting international health care and relief efforts. They offer aid to the needy regardless of race, creed or religious affiliation. However, history does record that at one point, the SMOM had a very dark underbelly:

But the needy aided by certain SMOM members in the late '40s were some of the 50,000 Nazi war criminals who, with the assistance of the International Red Cross, were furnished fake Vatican passports and, in some cases, clerical robes, and were smuggled on Bishop Alois Hudal's "underground railroad" to South America. Among those was Klaus Barbie, the "butcher of Lyons."

For those interested, the issuance of Vatican passports to Nazi criminals, with the help of the International Red Cross, was featured in our article, The Prussian Pontiff.

Recall also, in Urania - Part 4, we featured Klaus Barbie, who magically escaped conviction at Nuremberg. Maybe the "council of the gods" had greater plans for Klaus? The above record suggests that Klaus Barbie was one of the "needy" that was aided by the SMOM.

Klaus Barbie would go on to work with the CIA and Western German Intelligence:

Torturer, Arms Trafficker, CIA Spy: The Story Of Nazi War Criminal Klaus Barbie

By Daniel Rennie | Edited By Leah Silverman

Published April 2, 2019 | Updated April 3, 2019

After the war ended, Klaus Barbie pretended to be a hobo until he was picked up by the CIA to spy in Bolivia and fight against communism.

19

Let's return to the SMOM, just for a moment. One of its more prestigious awards is titled, "Grand Crosses of Merit".

In 1948, the SMOM gave one of its highest awards of honor, the Gran Croci al Merito con Placca, to General Reinhard Gehlen, Adolf Hitler's chief anti-Soviet spy. (Only three other people received this award.)

Gehlen was certainly not exaggerating about his close ties with the Vatican!

Did Reinhard Gehlen coordinate a global spy network that essentially merged the UK, US, Germany and Italy into one integrated intelligence operation? Recall that Gehlen was also working with NATO nations to embed Nazi "specialists" into their intelligence network.

Were these international connections in the late 1940s and early 1950s setting a foundation for a one-world government?

It is hard to believe that any major appointment, any new organization, or military funding, was not being carefully overseen by the fascists who were embedded inside the US, at this time.

It was notable then, that the Mitre Corporation arrived on the scene, resourced with taxpayer funds, and would go on to be one of the most significant "not-for-profits" cyber organizations on earth:

Jul 13, 2020, 06:30am EDT

Mitre Corp. runs some of the U.S. government's most hush-hush science and tech labs. The cloak-and-dagger R&D shop might just be the most important organization you've never heard of.

Whether it's an invisible Aston Martin or an exploding pen, whenever James Bond needs a high-tech edge, he heads right for Q and his secretive MI6 lab. In the real world, American agents often rely on a less clandestine, but far better-funded group. Armed with 8,000 employees and an annual budget of between $1 billion and $2 billion of taxpayers' money, Mitre Corp., a government-linked Skunk Works, has been making bleeding-edge breakthroughs for U.S. agencies for more than six decades. With its HQ housed in four towers atop a hill in McLean, Virginia, Mitre's research centers employ some of the nation's leading computer scientists and engineers to build digital tools for America's top military, security and intelligence organizations.

We understand that Mitre's name was derived from an initial connection with research occurring at Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) at Lincoln Laboratory. While this makes sense, the way they spelled their name was certainly 'unique'.

Having its name derived from MIT makes more sense than the other "mitre" that kept popping up in our research!

Mitre

With a mandate to bridge the gap between academic research and industry, Mitre may be one of the earliest Non-Government Organizations (NGOs), established in preparation for the hectic decade of research that would follow.

This research story will be continued in another series, “Trust ze Science”.

A final thought:

Throughout our articles we’ve identified what we call Prussian windows, which are apertures of time where we observed the invisible enemy covertly setting up for its next occupation. Today, we stand in front of another aperture – but this one is ours, not theirs. We are being presented with an opportunity to resist and expose this centuries-old regime of oppression and control.

Is this the point in history that we finally expose an ancient cult?

Is this the inflection point when the people of earth powerfully choose to “end the endless”?

The End.

Hi Will,

I read all your posts and have been very impressed with what you've researched so far. I read this post on badlands media about the possibility of the true puppet masters and my question is: Have you ever considered that the US may be the lapdog of the United Kingdom and/or Europe and not the other way around? When I read the article and looked at other substack articles, regarding the UK and searched the history of the British Empire and East India Company, the British Empire was known for being the largest empire in the 19th and

20th century at the height of its power and was known being an empire of colonialism. On Wikipedia, it said that "during the start of the 20th century, both Germany and the United States were challenging Britain's economic," " Military and economic tensions between Britain and Germany were major causes of the First World War, during which Britain relied heavily on its empire," "Although the empire achieved its largest territorial extent immediately after the First World War, Britain was no longer the world's preeminent industrial or military power." They also had a rivalry with Russia called "The Great Game," the Suez Crisis cause Britain to decline as a global power, they also handed over Hong Kong to China, and during the crisis, political groups in Egypt, especially the Muslim Brotherhood in Egypt, didn't like Britain's presence in their country and said that they played a role in the creation of Israel. Also, because of their colonialism in places like Africa, they were huge in the slave trade and colonized some areas in America at first. All this makes me wonder if the US are still British subjects, but not by name and if the whole world is not exactly suffering from US domination but from British domination? I feel it would make sense because the Americas, especially the US in particular. is still a young country compared to the Middle East. Asia. Africa. and Europe

All roads lead to Rome. Isn't just a saying, is it. I bet the Prussian bloodlines run straight back to the Black Nobility of Rome.
