It was nearly 4 years ago that a conversation began between two Aussie patriots. At the time, Australia was in the midst of the longest Covidiot lockdowns in history. Masks had to be worn at all times. You could not leave outside of a 3-5 mile radius from your residence, unless you had an “essential worker pass”. Groups in public could not exceed 3-4 people. Mandatory registration at all places, later to be enacted by QR codes on your phone. In Victoria, the freak show was so bad, the ReichsWEF stooge Premier Dan Andrews banned drinking in public. Please take the time to listen to the most ruthless tyrant in the world at the time. (3 mins)

That's what we were facing in Australia at the time. Many followed these directives with blind vigor, and in many cases policed their neighborhoods looking for dissidents. There were many who simply said NO to this remarkably tyrannical bullshit. Suffice to say, my 200 lb dog and I took regular walks along beaches, beer in hand and without masks. To the credit of most police officers, they never enforced the mask mandate to myself, or my dog – they simply wanted to come up and give the big boy a pat. We regularly gathered in massive groups. Backyard anti-covidiot parties sparked up around the nation. As for mandatory signing into venues in order to be tracked by the government, many Aussies told their ReichsWEF bureaucrats where to go:

NSW Minister For Health Brad Hazzard Torches People Who Sign Into Venues As 'Donald Duck'

By Freelancer

Published December 21, 2020

Brad Hazzard, on the other hand, used his time to stress the importance of signing your real name into venues and using QR codes to help make contact tracing easier.

"Now, what we are finding is that some of the visitors to various venues still think that it is funny to be caught putting in there that you're Donald Duck or Mickey Mouse or a false phone number," Hazzard said.

"That must stop. This is a worldwide COVID pandemic. And thinking it's smart to call yourself Donald Duck or Mickey Mouse is about as stupid as it gets.

However, the damage done to many Aussies was devastating. Some lost their businesses or their jobs, financially destroying them and their families. Some resorted to living in their cars with what little they had left. There were many Aussies who live overseas as expats at the time, and in order to visit their families, they needed to spend up to 2 weeks in quarantine facilities. This was generally in a hotel room, but the conditions were far from luxurious. In one case, a close friend was forced to do a 10 day stint in a Hong Kong quarantine, then 2 weeks in an Australian quarantine, and yet another 10 day stint back in Hong Kong when he returned to his job. All of this was to see his wife and children, who were living in Australia, for 3 weeks.

Perhaps the most heart wrenching story was from a father who needed to tell his story. Over a beer, or two, he explained to me how his wife was determined to have their young children vaccinated. He refused, and the matter went to court. He thought he had won the battle until his, now ex-wife, managed to have him arrested for a fake report of abuse. The police locked the man in the back of the wagon and explained to him he would stay there for the next few hours, until his wife was able to get his two young children jabbed. After a few hours, he was released from the police car, without charge. The poor bastard broke down. There were simply no words that could possibly console him.

These were the conditions of living in Australia 4 years ago, when a random conversation sparked between the two future contributors of #PrussiaGate. Two locked down strangers talking about the many faux pas' muttered by Trump during his first term as President. In particular, we were very curious why President Trump kept talking about the "Oranges of the investigation".

It was an innocent exploration into the “Oranges”, which led us to the origins of one of the longest reigning royal families in European history; the Hohenzollerns.

House of Hohenzollern

The head of the house is the titular King of Prussia and German Empire. He also bears a historical claim to the title of prince of Orange. Members of this line style themselves princes of Prussia.

Four years later and we are nearly at 90 articles about the history of Prussia and their influence on neo-liberal and neo-conservative Western culture. The militant kultur of Prussia has been the primary driver behind many aspects of modern civilization:

- the introduction of taxation to finance a permanent standing army that seeks to control rival nations, by any means necessary,
- Hegelian dialectic philosophy that promotes and justifies war as a means to progress, and division as a means to war,

- modern espionage, including the segregation of funds for the use of “black ops”, that Bismarck referred to as “Reptilienfonds”,
- welfare,
- the first gay rights movement, as well as the birth of the medical quackery of the “third gender”, termed as Uranian, but today is known as the alphabet soup of LGBTQI++
- modern public education to indoctrinate children to blindly follow State doctrine
- the modern PhD, a certificate declaring the student’s academic superiority relative to their peers,
- Freemasonry and the establishment of secret societies within American elite academia,
- Marxism, and later, Nazism. This includes the birth of radical Islam, or Islamic fascism,
- The foundations behind modern day central banking,
- the final judge on the Treaty of 1871, between the United States and Great Britain which became a key foundation for establishing international law, based in Switzerland, and later gave rise to the UN and its bastard children, UNESCO, the WHO and UNHRC,
- the impetus for NGOs to also base themselves in Switzerland and receive “Reptilienfonds” from government treasuries around the world to implement global scams such as climate change, rewilding, vaccines and global scamdemics, as well as condoms for deaf, dumb and blind Guatemalan trannies,
- and so much more....

The Swiss connection is important, because the Hohenzollern family’s rise to power began in the South German region of Swabia, right next to Switzerland. Curiously, the man who grew up in both Switzerland and Swabia, and later formed the notorious World Economic Forum in Switzerland, has an interesting namesake; Herr Klaus Schwab.

Perhaps these are all mere coincidences; correlated observations that exist solely in the conspiratorial mind of Will Zoll. Nevertheless, we find it remarkable how so much of our modern world has been shaped by Prussia and their royal family, the Hohenzollerns, princes of Orange.

And yet, Prussia barely gets a mention in history text books or curriculums throughout the world. The Hohenzollerns, along with the State of Prussia, have been gradually erased from the historical narrative. They were once great, but now they are gone, invisible to the modern world, or so we are told.

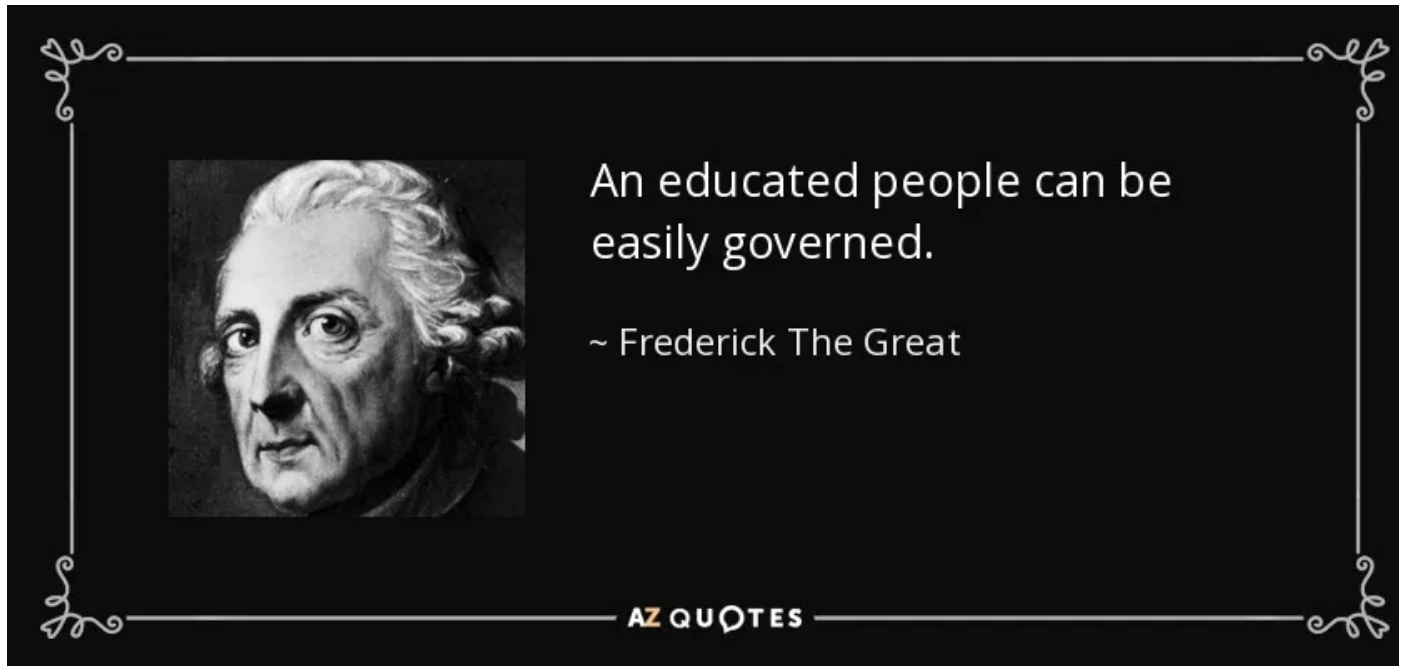

But as we looked back through the origins of the insanity of modern Western civilization, we continually traced the roots back to Prussia. Whether through political ideology, radical weaponized philosophy, central banking, education, institutionalized pedophilia, or even transgressions, somehow Prussia kept popping up everywhere.

There is a saying that “history is written by the winners”. With respect to Prussia, we are told they lost two wars, the German Empire collapsed, the royal family abdicated, and the State was officially abolished after WWII. We are told they were the unequivocal losers of the 20th Century, completely erased from the geopolitical stage. Yet somehow, their economic models and cultural legacy is all pervasive today.

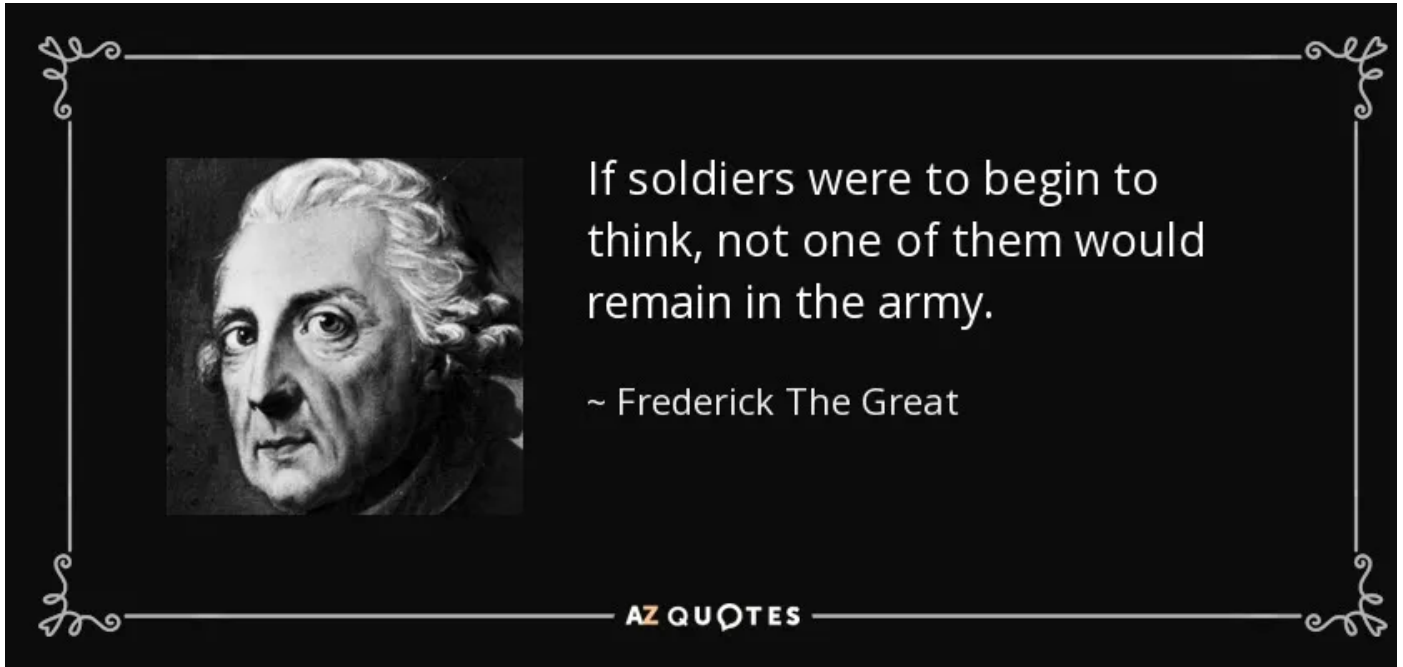

We contend that Prussia was never defeated, but instead transformed their power from Statehood and reinvested it into an army of globalist corporations and central banks, intent on securing the world’s resources and supply chains. Culturally, today the West resembles Weimar Germany. Completely divided, rife with corruption, degeneration and pedophilia.

If a nation’s economy and culture become Prussian, then eventually the political structure will adopt and accommodate Prussian policies and laws. Education will become Prussianized, as will central banking and taxation. However, it is education where history is taught.

If our contention is correct, and the kult of Prussia thrives in modern society through economy and culture, then why has almost nothing been taught about the great Prussian kingdom and its enormous influence on the modern world?

Frederick provides us with many clues as to the core of Prussian philosophy. Education is the key to governance, and therefore power. Education creates a skilled, taxpaying labor force. Most importantly, education is not just about what you learn. It is also about what you don't learn. An education without critical thinking was a critical aspect of the Prussian power structure.

Critical thinking could subvert the State's objectives. Prussians who began to think outside of their education could become a threat to the ruthless power exerted by Prussian Enlightened despotism.

Critical thinking allows you to observe and reverse engineer the numerous, insane aspects of the world we live in today. Since many of these societal aspects revert back to Prussia, learning and thinking about how our world has evolved could ignite a spark that destroys the cult of Prussia and its corporate army, the ReichsWEF.

Therefore, if the cult of Prussia were to narrate the 20th Century, would they not write as little as possible about themselves? If knowledge is power, then a lack of knowledge is weakness. To maintain power, therefore, always deprive your enemy of knowledge, especially about yourself.

Today, education curriculums are disseminated throughout the world by UNESCO. Children are taught about gender fluidity, climate change, overpopulation and the virtues of Marxism. There's a little bit of math, science and literature thrown in, but when it comes to history, where in the text books does it point to Prussia, let alone their colossal influence on the world today?

Thank You to Everyone

Each of our articles took many hours to create, in some cases over 60 hours. Without the underground lockdown parties in Australia, our innocent conversation about the “Oranges of the investigation” would never have taken place. Without the miserable stories heard at these gatherings, the motivation to sit down, think, investigate, discover and write about Prussia would never have happened. It was the klownshow o the moronic Australian bureaucracy that we have to thank for the initiation of #PrussiaGate.

Never did we think this journey would continue, 4 years later, with so much more material yet to compile and present. Moreover, never did we think this endeavor would spark so much interest on the internet. We have seen #PrussiaGate translated into various languages, posted throughout the world on multiple platforms, and narrated b patriots around the world on their social media accounts.

Truthsoldier76 started the ball rolling early, reading our early articles, and getting the word out about the invisible Prussian history. We sincerely thank you, Truthsoldier76.

<https://rumble.com/c/c-1047103>

Next, Defender of the Republic re-posted and promoted our work throughout her social media platforms. She is truly a defender of freedom, justice and truth. We cannot thank you enough.

<https://defenderoftherepublic.online/>

We could never thank enough the enormous time taken by Patrick Gunnels’ reads of our work. Our articles were long, and sometimes I put in the weirdest Germanic word possible just to see how he went with pronouncing them. We were not disappointed, and Patrick never failed to impress. It is an honor to be amongst the other creators that Patrick narrates. Thank you very much, mate.

<https://rumble.com/user/pgunnels>

Jon Herold, from the famed Devolution series, also engaged us in his work. Jon is a colleague in critical thinking, and his series is an incredible in-depth expose into the potentialities of what may be truly evolving throughout the last 4 years with Biden allegedly at the helm. His mentions of #PrussiaGate no doubt promoted our work throughout his reader base. We are in deep gratitude for his exposure of #PrussiGate.

<https://badlandsmedia.tv/>

Lastly, the people we have to thank the most are our readers. The hundreds of thousands of readers who have visited our substack page over the years is truly astounding. Whats-more, the thousands of positive comments regarding our work have been a huge driver in our continuing search for the “oranges of the investigation

Even the occasional negative comment has been a joy to read. Criticism is a key part i the quest for truth. Nothing is absolute, and occasionally the odd criticism leads us into a new #PrussiaGate dimension.

To all of our readers, we give you our sincerest thank you and hopefully you will look forward to the future of #PrussiaGate as much as we do!

On that note, it is time to think about how We the People can continue to discover an destroy the horrible, invisible enemy, once and for all.

What you Know and What you Don't

President Trump and his team are wasting no time in exposing and removing the horrible invisible enemy from America. It is almost impossible to keep up to date with what is transpiring, which is why in our last article we used Karl Marx's Communist Manifesto to provide a birds-eye view of things. Nearly every aspect of Karl Marx's ter point plan is being dismantled and destroyed by Trump, the DOGE, and everyone else on the team.

Almost all Western bureaucracies, worldwide, have been captured by radical Marxist ideology. Most public servants and politicians no longer see it as their duty to serve their fellow citizens. Instead, they talk down to the people, instructing them what to do, where to go, and how to behave. However, unlike their mentor Karl Marx, who was a fat, unhygienic slob of a man who lived in perpetual abject poverty, many politicians and their bureaucratic servants these days live “high on the hog”. Since the pandemic they rarely come into the office and somehow accumulate enormous, untold wealth.

It is hard to fathom how politicians amass so much wealth while working overtime to serve “We the People”. Who needs to spend 80 hours a week as a hedge fund manager or crypto trader, when all you need to do is get into public office and watch your investment portfolio outperform everything else on the planet!

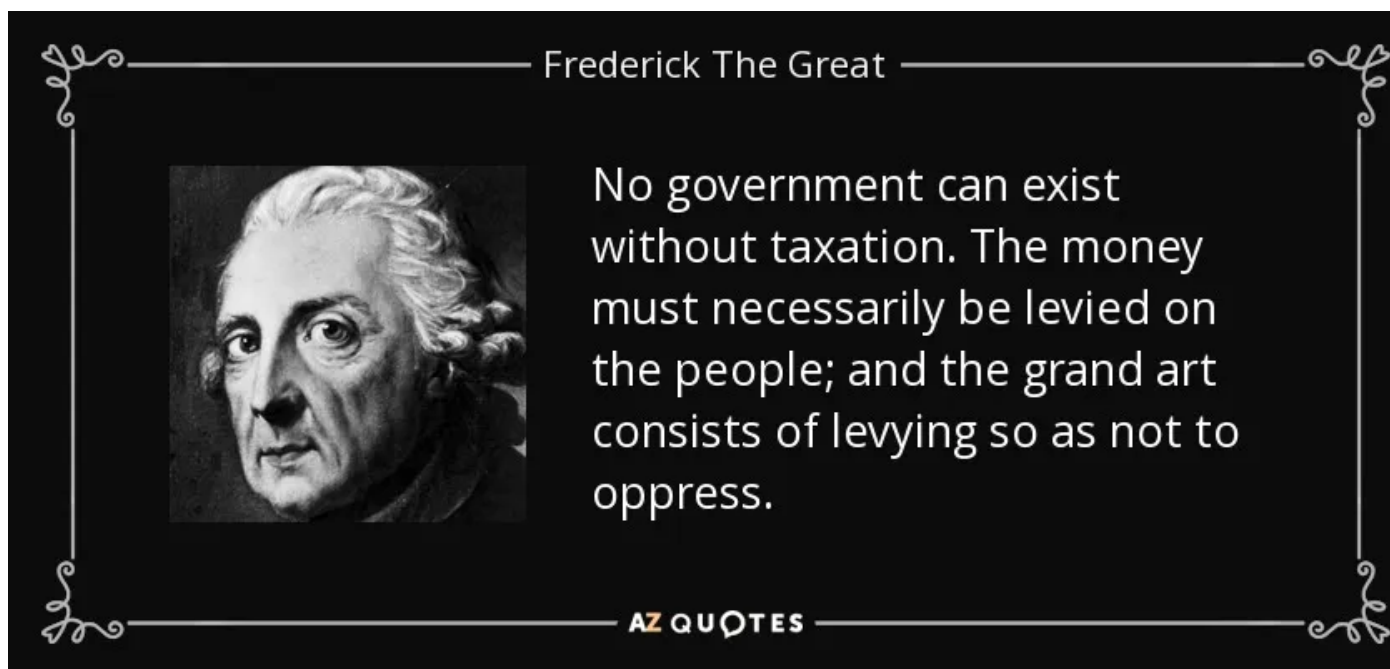

Obviously there is something that has gone horribly awry. However, many of the political class and the lobbyists that buy their favor see nothing wrong with the situation. As the average person is watching their standard of living capitulate, the political industrial complex continues to unashamedly prosper while blaming Trump and those that support his agenda for everything gone wrong in the world.

How did we find ourselves in this situation? Perhaps the answer lies in our earlier discussion about education. Education is not necessarily about what you learn, but what you are kept from learning. For many, once they have completed high school, college, or even their PhD, they will be unable to answer a very simple question:

What is the biggest investment in your lifetime?

So far, whether it is at the local pub or in a conference room, no one has been able to answer this question. It is not an ambiguous question, the answer is quite easily defined. Some talk about their kids, others talk about their education, their health, house or even their spirituality. They are all incorrect.

The answer is simple; it is your government. The payment plan is also simple; it is through taxation. Income tax, capital gains tax, property tax, sales tax, etc, etc....

For most people living in the West, taxation is not only oppressive, it represents the largest portion of their income. If you translate your annual tax bill into days of labor, and then sum that over the course of your working career, you will soon discover that you invested well over a decade of your life into your government.

A savvy investment will normally provide a substantial return over time, delivering the investor a better standard of living in the future. How's your long-term investment in government working out for you today?

Moreover, what is the second biggest investment in your lifetime?

This, of course, can be an ambiguous question because it involves the money that you have left in your pocket after taxes. Generally speaking, one's own home becomes the primary source of wealth for families. The dream to own your own home is synonymous throughout the West, and in turn most people require mortgages to buy their first homes.

What is the primary driver for mortgage rates? Central banks and their determination of the "price of money", otherwise known as interest rates.

Therefore, government and central banks are the biggest determinant of your future standard of living because, for many, interest and tax payments represent the largest portion of their earned income, throughout their entire working life.

Why is any of this important? Were you ever educated about how many decades of your life you needed to dedicate to your government and central bank in order to live the great Western dream?

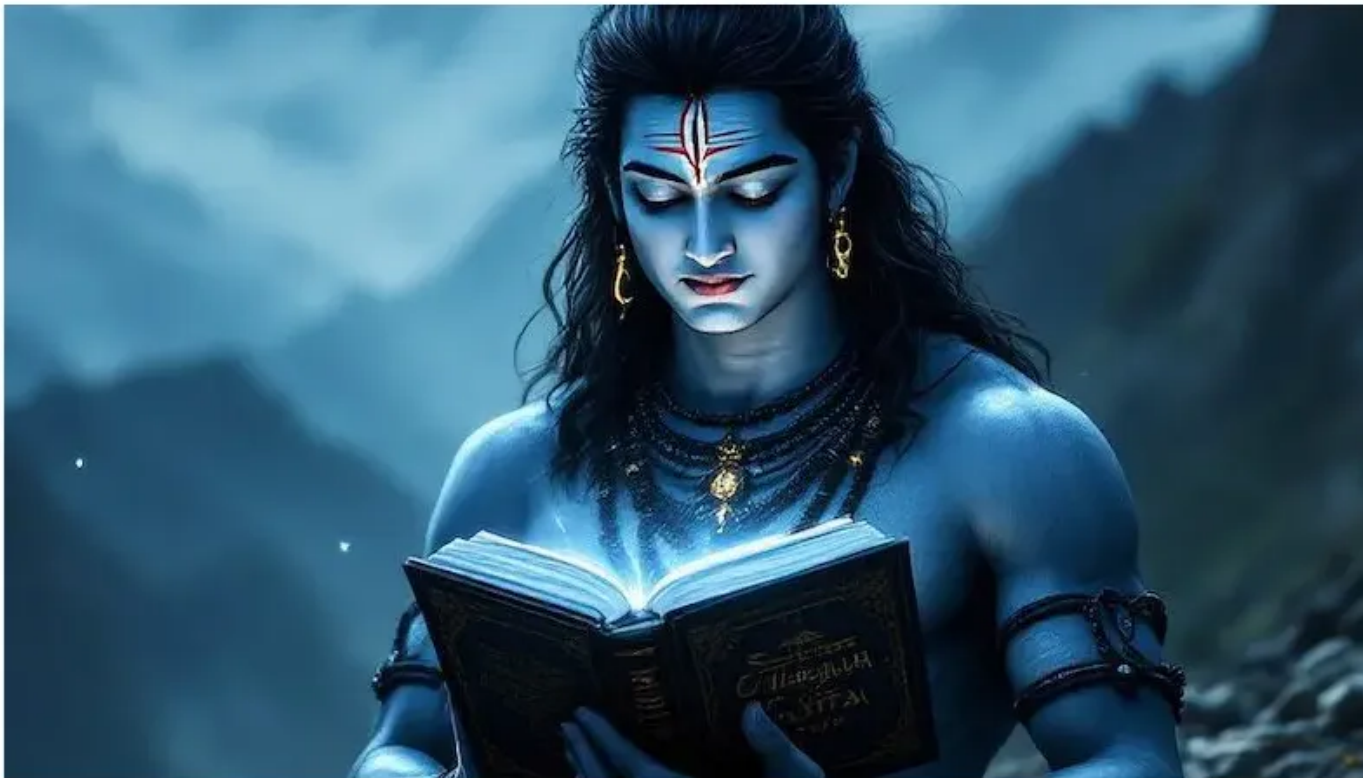

Education is not about what you learn, but more about what you don't learn. In the words of Frederick the Great, an educated people are easy to govern.

Think about our respective educational backgrounds and how much we did not know, until now. What did we learn about:

- taxation, central banking and fiat currency?
- how the most successful and financially rewarding career is in politics?
- medicine, especially mRNA vaccines?

- food, and the garbage non-food we eat? or
- why some of the most powerful and wealthiest people on earth needed to travel to Little St. James Island and be entertained by the convicted child traffickers, Jeffrey Epstein and Ghislaine Maxwell?

This is just the tip of the iceberg. In mathematics, Western civilization has been taught their multiplication tables primarily through rote, and unfortunately many still struggle with basic mathematical literacy. However, in India, the multiplication tables are learned using Vedic mathematics; a system that is thousands of years old.

Vedic Mathematics: Ancient India's Gift To The Modern Global Mathematical Landscape – Analysis

For those with a numerical background, you will appreciate that the basic multiplication tables using the Vedic system also introduces the use of simultaneous equations at the same time. As a result, children who learn through the Vedic system find it much easier to progress into complex mathematical subjects.

Advanced Applications of Vedic Mathematics

In recent years, Vedic Mathematics has evolved from a tool for simplifying arithmetic operations to a framework with potential applications in advanced and modern scientific fields. Researchers and scholars are actively exploring ways to adapt its principles to areas like calculus, matrix algebra, cryptography, and even quantum computing. The adaptability and flexibility of Vedic methods make them a fertile ground for innovation and integration into emerging technologies.

Computational fluid dynamics, Artificial Intelligence and Machine Learning all use huge arrays, in CSV-type data files, in programs that use computational matrix algebra. It's not rocket science (pun intended), but it's much easier for a person who has learned the foundations of Vedic mathematics to comprehend seemingly incomprehensible topics.

If you have the time, and you love numbers, the Vedic system is very easy to learn. But the point of the story is about education. It's not about what you have learned, but what you have not learned.

The same is true for the top elite schools around the world. Why do those students, predominantly, need to hand-write most of their assignments?

Handwriting Boosts Brain Connectivity and Learning

If this is true, why are our children learning through computers, tablets, and zoom meetings? One would assume that the idea of a good education is to boost brain connectivity and learning.

In Australia, there is a teacher who is not a teacher, but is respected by every school master that knows of him. Students who are lucky enough to receive his tutoring embark on a vicious journey of handwriting, reading comprehension, and essay writing. Their wrists become unbearably sore, as do their eyes and brains. Within no time, a student who only knew touchscreen pads and keyboards becomes an essay-handwriting ninja.

Whether its maths, handwriting, science, health or #PrussiaGate, there is always a way to get an education that is OUTSIDE of an education.

That is how we learn to think, and escape Frederick the Great's paradigm of easily governed rats that are destined for our article, Death Squared.

An Old Way to Learn and Think?

There are no answers, only questions. Way back in Ancient Greece, Socrates already worked this out:

COLORADO STATE UNIVERSITY

THE INSTITUTE FOR LEARNING AND TEACHING

The Socratic Method: Fostering Critical Thinking

"Do not take what I say as if I were merely playing, for you see the subject of our discussion—and on what subject should even a man of slight intelligence be more serious? —namely, what kind of life should one live . . ."

Socrates

Perhaps this is why he was forced to drink Hemlock. He was suicided!!

Why Did Socrates Drink Poison And Commit Suicide?

Z

Intelligence is not handed to Ivy League PhDs or politicians who embrace Frederick the Great's mandate of power through the social contract of Enlightened Despotism. Intelligence is available to all of us, regardless of our background. All we have to do is ask questions, and learn to think about the things we now know that we do not know.

Frederick, who was a genius in his own right, knew this all too well:

President Trump is beginning to clean out the shit that has infected Western Civilization for far too long. It has morphed into a parasitic industrial complex that seeks to milk We the People for everything we are worth, with a final plan to depopulate us once the cost of our existence exceeds the value they extract from us.

For us to truly escape the invisible prison that has been placed around us, we must embark on a journey of learning, no matter our age. A decentralized revitalization of intelligence that gave the world trains, planes, automobiles, computers, fresh running water and toilets.

This is the true future of humanity, and #PrussiaGate intends to be part of that journey.

The End

Love your work a very interesting read. I do think however you have missed something - International Public Notice: With Truth and Justice For All - <https://annavonreitz.com/truthandjusticeforall.pdf> - Trump is simply doing his job. There are still many things he is "allowing" that are not good for humanity, jobs are one of them but we will have to see how things pan out.

What a beautiful post! You are so correct about each point and I learned a great deal of what we are taught starting with the PrussiaGate series that I've recommended as a MUST read many, many times. When I read it, I realized how this was the key to understanding today!! I am college educated (went to college when my kids were young) I realized how much I didn't know....that observation has remained for all these years and at 73, I am just as curious as ever. I hand write notes for everything important because I remember better. Playing bridge is a great way for strategic thinking, too. It's why we play. After reading your initial series, it became apparent that we didn't truly win WWII, but the Nazis infiltrated the US, their new HQ likely DC. When looking at all the agencies, actions, propaganda, media, etc., a new political elite political, entertainment, surveillance, taxation, security all point to th

I also consider that Israel is the culmination of the Prussian goal to rule the world from their 'own' country. (In conjunction with DC, London City, and the Vatican. Time will tell, of course, but you have been a huge part of discovering what we were not taught; God has gifted you for this key role. 🙏 You are MUCH appreciated! THANK YOU.
